

Puss in Boots

Characters

Purr is a tomcat, but not just any tomcat! He is very clever and has the ability to speak. But his poor master Tom has to give him away. So Purr decides to help Tom and make him Tom a count, who will marry Princess Christine. And because Purr, the Puss In Boots, is brave, cunning and smart, he manages to achieve a happy ending for Tom and himself.

Tom inherits the tomcat “Purr” from his father. When Purr promises to make him a count, he couldn’t believe it at first. Tom himself is very cautious and not as brave as his cat. Nevertheless, he trusts him, even though he gets very worried about Purr when he goes to confront the wizard Marlos.

Master tailor Friday is a nice person, as long as you don’t get his surname wrong. Because if you do, he can get very angry. But he is also a very good tailor who can make a beautiful blue jacket for the Puss in Boots.

King Edmund is a kind and gentle king for whom justice is very important. Even more important to him, however, is his daughter Christine. He hopes that one day she will find a nice, handsome and rich husband. When he meets Purr, he is certain that his master must be the right man for her.

Princess Christine takes an instant liking to Tom when she sees him for the first time. But she also quickly realizes, that he is not a real count. Nevertheless, she wants to get to know him and spend time with him. When Tom admits at the end, that he is just the son of a poor miller, it doesn't change her love for him.

The wizard Marlos is a very tricky and powerful magician, but also a little bit dense. That is why he believes almost everything that Purr, the tomcat, tells him. In the end, he even lets himself be persuaded to turn into a little mouse, even though he should know how much cats like to eat mice.